

cherry picked 10: the winter edition

hello! it's warm and cozy here at brandreth while we enjoy the winter temperatures of -15 degrees (celsius). i'm chilling here writing this newsletter while Andy Potter rants about whatever he's thinking about at the moment which seems to be this vintage IBM computer from the 90s. it's really cold which i'm enjoying immensely.

i spent my second christmas with stella's family this year which was really fun, i continued my tradition of christmas flowers and we all enjoyed them on christmas eve.

are there any christmas traditions that you enjoy?

i picked up a koni omega rapid, aka "the kerchunk" (thanks ethan), and i've been shooting with it over the past couple weeks over break. i'm like, really really enjoying it which is surprising since it's such a huge camera. those camera engineers in the 50s were really not playing around. these cameras are almost entirely metal, which is honestly awesome but so heavy...

and thanks to aidan (@aidansciort) for lending me it :)
